A note about risk

All investing is subject to risk, including the possible loss of the money you invest. Investments in target-date investments are subject to the risks of their underlying funds. The year in the investment name refers to the approximate year (the target date) when an investor would retire and leave the workforce. The investment will gradually shift its emphasis from more aggressive investments to more conservative ones based on its target date. An investment in a target-date investment is not guaranteed at any time, including on or after the target date.

While U.S. Treasury or government agency securities provide substantial protection against credit risk, they do not protect investors against price changes due to changing interest rates. Although the market values of government securities are not guaranteed and may fluctuate, these securities are guaranteed as to the timely payment of principal and interest. Bond funds are subject to the risk that an issuer will fail to make payments on time, and that bond prices will decline because of rising interest rates or negative perceptions of an issuer's ability to make payments. Funds that invest in derivatives are subject to a number of risks, such as liquidity risk, interest rate risk, market risk, credit risk, and management risk. A fund investing in a derivative instrument could lose more than the principal amount invested. High-yield bonds generally have medium- and lower-range credit quality ratings and are therefore subject to a higher level of credit risk than bonds with higher credit quality ratings. Prices of mid- and small-cap stocks often fluctuate more than those of large-company stocks. Investments in stocks or bonds issued by non-U.S. companies are subject to risks including country/regional risk and currency risk. These risks are especially high in emerging markets. Funds that concentrate on a relatively narrow market sector face the risk of higher share-price volatility. Because company stock funds concentrate on a single stock, they are considered riskier than a diversified stock mutual fund.

¹ You could lose money by investing in the Fund. Although the Fund seeks to preserve the value of your investment at $1.00 per share, it cannot guarantee it will do so. An investment in the Fund is not insured or guaranteed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or any other government agency. The Fund's sponsor has no legal obligation to provide financial support to the Fund, and you should not expect that the sponsor will provide financial support to the Fund at any time.

*The cost of running the investment, expressed as a percentage of its assets, as of the most recent fund prospectus or trust fact sheet. For Vanguard Target Retirement Funds, Vanguard LifeStrategy® Funds and Vanguard STAR® Fund, this figure is an average weighted expense ratio, based on expenses incurred by the Vanguard funds that make up each fund. For any fund in existence for less than one year, the expense ratio is the projected cost of running the fund. This data is as of the most recent fund prospectus. Source: Morningstar, Inc.
